Our pets need to eat a nutritionally balanced diet, with the right balance of protein, carbohydrates, fat, vitamins and minerals.

Protein: builds muscle and tissues, and is needed for a healthy coat, skin and nails.

Carbohydrates: the main source of fuel, providing energy, keeping them bright and active.

Fats: an additional source of energy and required by every cell in our pets' bodies.

The correct balance of these elements in our pets' diets is important. Diets that contain too much fat and carbohydrates can lead to obesity-related health problems.

Vitamins and minerals are essential to facilitate the biochemical processes throughout the body, but are required in much smaller doses.
